Democracy School

MONDAY, MARCH 22, 2010

Cape Ann Community Cinema

21 Main Street * Gloucester, MA (Above Mystery Train Records)

- The people most affected by decisions should be the ones making them, so why are decisions on important issues that affect everyday life – like water, fishing and development – not in the hands of real people?
- When you voice community opposition to an approved project, do your elected officials tell you, “There is nothing I can do” or even worse, “My hands are tied”? Do you wonder why they say this?
- Do you understand the phrase, “corporate rights”?

Ben Price, Projects Director for the Community Environmental Legal Defense Fund, and Gail Darrell, CELDF N.E. Community Organizer, will be the lecturers for the next citizen training session that provides answers to the questions above, and teaches a new strategy to reclaim our authority as self-governing people.
